The program consisted of speeches, community singing, and a lecture by blind Mila Baker on the topic, "Dell, My Seeing Eye Dog". It was very inspiring for us to see such a large group of our ladies and to realize what combined efforts and cooperation can do.

New Lenox Searching Party Finds Missing Boy

Norman Koller, 2 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Koller, Jr., of New Lenox caused considerable excitement last Saturday when he wandered away from his home.

Norman was playing in the yard of his home alone a few minutes while his mother went into the house. She called him a few minutes later and was unable to find him.

Immediately the alarm was spread and in a very short time about 100 men, women and children were making a search for the missing child.

The New Lenox Boy Scouts gave valiant aid. The search lasted about three hours and just at dusk as Robert Drake (also aiding the parents in the search) was driving up Cooper street he heard the cries of a child coming from a nearby corn field in the vicinity of the Joseph Novak home close to the Hickory Creek and a good half mile from the child's home.

Following the sound of the cries, the searching party found Norman and "Bonzo" a dog belonging to Geo. Marshall. The dog sensing the danger the child was in of possible drowning in the swollen creek had placed his paws on the little boy's shoulders and held him down to the ground. When members of the rescuing party attempted to pick up the boy, the dog snapped at them. Later when Norman was taken home, the dog followed to the Koeller home and barked and whined until the little lad was brought out on the porch and then "Bonzo" apparently satisfied that his charge was safe, went home and slept.

When the search first started it was thought the boy had gone towards his new home on Wood street, just off North Cedar Road, but instead he had headed east toward the Hickory Creek.

Friends of the Koeller family were on the verge of calling the state police and Mr. Koeller who is an airplane pilot, was just making arrangements for a plane, with the idea of flying low over New Lenox, when the missing boy was found and carried home by Robert Drake.

The dog was acclaimed a hero and is the most popular canine in New Lenox right now.

Europe Looks To U. S. Farms For Food in '42

To Ask Increased Production Of Most Farm Products Over 1941 Record.

By L. G. ELLIOTT
President, LaSalle Extension University

NEW YORK CITY.—"Arsenal for the Democracies" is the role which is being enacted by the United States in the present world conflict. The far-flung industrial activity which has resulted has made itself felt in every section of the country and in every type of enterprise. So far, the effect felt by the farmers has been principally the indirect result of increased purchasing power created by the up-swing in industrial production.

Prospects for the immediate future, however, are that the American farmer will be called upon to contribute just as directly as do the munition makers today. According to the department of agriculture estimates, 10,000,000 persons abroad will be dependent upon exports from the United States for their sustenance. In 1942, farmers will be asked to increase production in certain crops even beyond that of 1941, one of the most productive years in history.

With the exception of certain crops such as cotton, wheat and tobacco, which will continue to be curtailed because of large surpluses and loss of some important foreign markets, most major crops will be needed in larger quantities. The leaders will be livestock, dairy products, eggs and vegetables—the very products which have been adding most to the increased farm income of 1941. With the gains experienced during the first six months of this year and the estimated $1,000,000,000 increase in farm income estimated for the last six months, the total farm income for 1941 will exceed $10,500,000,000 compared with only slightly more than $9,000,000,000 for 1940.

It is expected that present price levels will at least be maintained if not increased to some degree. Even based on today's prices, the increased production schedule will boost the farm income in 1942 to a higher figure than any year since 1920. Dairy farmers have been averaging 20 per cent more income this year than a year ago and the goal for 1942 in this branch of agriculture is a still further 8 per cent increase. The schedule for 1942 hog production is for better than 11 per cent increase over 1941, or 80,000,000 head as compared with the 71,000,000 pigs slaughtered this year. Seventeen per cent more cattle are now on feed in preparation for the new increased markets.

It is not expected that the new demands for farm products will result in the dislocations which are bothering some lines of manufacturing and some communities where manufacturers have had to curtail operations because of their inability to secure certain raw materials. The industrial picture as a whole is decidedly favorable. The national trend is still upward and payrolls as well as production are steadily rising. Many industries such as steel and machinery are not only operating at close to present capacity, but are constantly adding new plants. The effect of industrial prosperity is felt directly in the cities and the resultant better markets still further increase the demand for manufactured items as well as farm products.

At the present time, approximately 20 per cent of the income received by all persons emanates from defense spending. This now aggregates more than $1,000,000,000 monthly and the next few months will see this increased to a still higher figure.

Farm Conditions Improve

LaSalle Map of Business Conditions

Plans for increased farm production, in all major products, except cotton, wheat and tobacco, which will lag due to surpluses and present lack of market, are prevalent over the entire country. In the front rank will be livestock, dairy products, eggs and vegetables, present chief source of farm income.

U. S. 'Non-Combatants' Corps in England

The above picture shows a group from the first American civilian technical corps as they arrived "somewhere in England," recently, for non-combatant duties in the British armed forces. They are all trained automobile and radio technicians, and seem happy, despite the rain which falls frequently in the British Isles.

Soldiers Depend on Quartermaster For Food, Shelter and Transportation

ATLANTA, GA.—The army has a name for the vast, intricate and vital Quartermaster corps activity. They call it logistics. For the man on the street, the term is readily understandable when translated as a design for living.

How soldiers live, are quartered, supplied and, in this day of mechanized warfare, how they are transported is something John Q. Citizen can comprehend when he puts it on the same plane which he designs for his own comfort and ability to move about.

What the Quartermaster corps does for more than a million and a half soldiers John Q. Citizen must do for himself. His design for living is only multiplied by the army but somewhere in the multiplication the army tacked on the term logistics, which the dictionary defines as "that branch of military art which embraces the details of transport, quartering and supply of troops."

So John Q. Citizen begins to understand logistics when he compares it to the possession and operation of his motor car; tenting and furnishing of his home; supplying his family with clothing, groceries, meats, vegetables and other necessities of life, even down to the ice box in summer and filling the coal bin for the winter.

Not many citizens who maintain and own their own automobiles could orient their daily lives in these times to a new design for living which did not include control of their motor cars. The housewife, to whom the Quartermaster corps often has been compared, recognizes the necessity of having the automobile ready for instant use when it comes time to meet the 5:15 bringing hub-home from the office. Mrs. Citizen isn't at all in favor of calling her neighbor on the telephone and asking use of the neighbor's motor car to fulfill a responsibility which she has long recognized as her own.

The army in its plan of logistics calls for a simplified system on the service of supply to the front lines with Quartermaster corps not only responsible for assembly of supplies, but to insure their arrival responsible also for transportation.

Motor Service Station.

To meet this motor transport problem the Quartermaster corps is moving with tremendous speed in establishing regional motor maintenance districts throughout the country. Facilities are being installed at a central point in interlocking hundred mile circles to keep each motor vehicle in first class condition and uphold the Quartermaster corps slogan, "Keep 'em Rolling."

Like the housewife who demands her automobile be ready when she wants it the Quartermaster corps has pledged that no motor vehicle shall remain out of service because of damaged or worn out equipment. Instead the quartermaster will remove the damaged part and install in its place a new one, sending the damaged equipment to the regional depot for repair but keeping the motor truck in service for the troops and live up to the demand to "Keep 'em rolling."

Logistics, or design for living, so closely links the operation of the transportation with the service of supply that there is scarcely a citizen who does not see the parallel to his daily life in the activities of the Quartermaster corps.

Variety of Duties.

The quartermaster not only is the ice and coal man, but he is the haberdasher, the restaurant man and the hotel keeper. He runs the taxi service and operates the trucking, transfer and storage business as well. He is the garage man and the operator of the gasoline filling station; the railroad ticket agent in addition to being the train dispatcher. He is the garbage collector and the second hand salvage dealer. He operates the laundry and shoe repair shop in addition to conducting the clothing store and managing all the five and tens.

All of a city's public utility facilities the Quartermaster corps furnishes for the soldier much in the manner which a city manager, or the mayor and board of selectmen or aldermen of a city, conduct those functions in a community. He provides the water supply, and the sewage disposal; he runs the electric light plant, paves the streets in camp, builds parkways and operates the fire department.

Only the war-time essentials of these duties does the Quartermaster corps take with it in providing the design for living for troops in a theater of action. To execute behind the lines these requirements of transport, quartering and supply the army always has selected the highly trained Quartermaster corps and given to the duties demanded under that selection the term logistics which comes from the Greek word "logistikos" which has as its root the word "lego" which means to select.

Claim Gifted Child Neglected by Schools

EVANSTON, ILL.—Is there a young genius in your home? There could be, whether your income tax is thousands of dollars a year or you don't know where the next month's rent is coming from.

This is the report of Dr. W. Drayton Lewis, assistant professor of psychology at Murray State Teachers college, Murray, Ky.

Dr. Lewis studied 50 of the most brilliant children in a group of 50,000 selected from schools all over the country—each a "one-in-a-thousand" child on the basis of intelligence tests. All had IQ's over 145—100 is "normal."

"It is tragic," Dr. Lewis said, "that these gifted children are so mistreated in the schools. Our educational system neglects the most promising students. Only one boy in five and two girls in five of the outstanding group were characterized by their teachers as being precocious or mentally quick. Two of them were even called dull or mentally sluggish. These children, who rate one in a thousand among their classmates, are not even recognized by their teachers as bright, because the educational system keeps them down to the level of the average."

The economic status of the children's homes, Dr. Lewis reported, varies from poverty to affluence, and the social status is equally divergent.

"These exceptionally intelligent children," he said, "can be expected in any type of home. The fathers come from all levels of society. They are high school principals, army officers, doctors, ministers, mercantile men, government employees, farmers, barbers, truck drivers, mill hands, factory workers, and common laborers." In fact, they are from all walks of life.

Blind and Deaf Radio Operator Beats Obstacles

First Man So Handicapped To Get License 'Hears' Code Vibrations.

NEW YORK.—Leo Sadowsky, 21, who recently received a license as an amateur radio operator from the Federal Communications commission, although he is blind and a deaf mute, told through an interpreter how he achieved his ambition.

Mr. Sadowsky, interested in radio since he was a child, began studying to be an operator five years ago. A few weeks ago he passed the examination and became the first blind deaf mute licensed amateur radio operator in history.

Mr. Sadowsky was born deaf, and has never learned to speak. When he was almost two years old, he was playing with a salt shaker which fell to the floor and broke. A piece of glass struck the pupil of his left eye, making it useless. As he became older, the right eye, overtaxed, weakened, and at the age of 16 he became totally blind.

Teacher Discourages.

Five years ago, when he began study at the Institute for the Education of the Blind, his teacher, Robert Gunderson, tried to discourage him from radio work, saying that the subject would be almost impossible for a deaf person to master. He turned Mr. Sadowsky out of the class five or six times, but the youth refused to be dissuaded and his persistence eventually won Mr. Gunderson to his side.

Radio code signals were taught to him by means of a buzzer, on which he could lay his hand and feel a vibration when Mr. Gunderson rang a bell. Next, Mr. Gunderson, who is also blind, prepared a special course for him in Braille characters. Later he learned to receive short wave signals through a switch attachment which received radio signals and cut them from a frequency of 2,000 to 3,000 cycles a second to 200 cycles or less. The lower frequency caused a vibration which he could feel through his hands.

When he was ready to take his examination, a new difficulty came up. Government regulations state that short wave signals must be transmitted through earphones. It is difficult for Mr. Sadowsky to feel vibrations through earphones but he learned to do even this by a switch which received the signal and then relayed it by sending a 60-cycle current through the earphones.

Means Much to Him.

The fact that he is now a licensed amateur radio operator means much to Mr. Sadowsky. Until now he has been able to communicate only with the limited number of persons who can use the touch system of spelling out words by tapping their fingers on his palm. His own home radio set, which will soon be installed, will put him in touch with some 60,000 amateur operators all over the country. His station number is W2OFU. Other amateur operators have sent him their numbers, asking that he tune in and get acquainted. Through use of the Morse code he will have a wider contact with the outside world than he has ever known.

His present ambition is to perfect some method of making it easier for other deaf-mutes to use radio sets.

How R.A.F. Saved Legless Ace in 20,000 Foot Jump

LONDON.—Calling the episode the "most dramatic five minutes of the war," the Daily Express told how the Spitfire planes of legless R.A.F. Wing Commander Douglas R. Bader's squadron covered that ace's 20,000 foot parachute jump over German territory last month.

Bader told his squadron he must leave his plane and his second in command promptly gave the order to "see him safely to the ground, nothing else matters."

"So as he floated down, the Spitfires spiraled around him in a protective coil, their circles ever shifting and lower until he had only a few hundred feet to go," the paper said. "They watched him come to earth. They could do no more."

By agreement with the Germans, who captured Bader, the R.A.F. dropped another artificial leg to replace the one he damaged in the parachute landing.

Youth, 14, Hero, Saves Five Girls From Drowning

OGDEN, UTAH.—Fourteen-year-old Lynn Stoddard of Riverdale, Utah, probably is in line for a life-saving medal.

Lynn was standing on the shore of Pine View lake near where he saw five young girls wander into the water. A wave swept them out into water over their heads.

Lynn quickly plunged into the cold lake. One by one he pulled four of the girls to safety—knocking one of them out when she became panicky and nearly pulled her rescuer down with her.

Then Lynn realized there was one more girl missing. Back into the lake he swam until he arrived over a spot where bubbles were coming to the surface. He dived, grabbed the fifth girl, and brought her to shore, unconscious, and, aided by another passer-by gave her artificial respiration that soon restored consciousness.

Hen Mothers Litter Of 7 Squealing Pigs

DECATUR, ILL.—One of Ira Weatherford's hens, denied accommodations for hatching chickens, is mothering a litter of seven squealing pigs.

The clucking biddy spreads her wings and shoos the porkers from one spot to another. The unprotesting sow sleeps in the same pen.

Tot in Coma 104 Days After Fall

Is Recovering After Waging Long, Hard Fight.

WHITEN, IOWA.—Life is flowing back into the body of Roger Arnold, four, who lay in a deathlike sleep for 104 days.

Last October 21 Roger toppled off the Whitten Sunday school steps and fell on his head. Three days later he was taken unconscious to a hospital.

From then until April 9 he waged a struggle there, first against spinal meningitis, then against pneumonia and finally against encephalitis (sleeping sickness). He conquered all of them and came back to the modern little farmhouse of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter F. Arnold, still only half alive.

When he had barely recovered from meningitis, he contracted a cold that developed into pneumonia and gave him a fever of 107 degrees. Then on December 27 he lapsed into a sleep that continued until April 9. During that time he was fed through a tube.

Now he lies in his bedroom while his mother feeds him strengthening foods and attempts to develop his speech.

His progress is gratifying to his parents, who still take him twice a week to a physician for examination.

His sight has not returned completely and he blinks his eyes—closed for so long—at the shadow of a hand. His toys are unfamiliar to him but he chews gum now, something he could not do when he came from the hospital.

As if his three hospital ordeals weren't enough, Roger incurred an attack of measles after his return home. They slowed his development for 10 days.

While he was in the hospital he grew taller. His weight has increased from 27 pounds in January to 34 pounds now.

When his mother counts "one," he manages to say "two."

Watch Clue Brings About Arrest in Slaying Case

NEW YORK.—A pawned wrist watch led to the arrest of a suspect in the slaying of Mrs. Evelyn Dorothea Andersen, pretty 26-year-old waitress who was robbed, attacked and left dead in a vacant lot in the Bronx on August 4.

Trailed to Washington, D. C., after discovery of the stolen watch in a Harlem pawnshop, James Roosevelt Catoe, 30-year-old Negro, was held pending extradition. Police said his home was in Washington but that he lived in Harlem two months and went back to the capital after the slaying.

New York city detectives were in Washington arranging for Catoe's return to New York, the suspect having refused to waive extradition proceedings.

Mrs. Andersen was last seen when she left her home in upper Manhattan, where she lived with her husband, Erhardt Andersen, on the morning of August 4 for work. She was found dead of strangulation that night.

Andersen gave police the number of a wrist watch she was wearing. They traced the watch to a Harlem pawnshop and found that a Negro girl had pawned it. The girl said Catoe gave her the watch and a handbag identified as belonging to Mrs. Andersen.

Vicious Chulos Attack Coon Hounds on Hunts

TUCSON, ARIZ.—Coon dogs and hounds, which are used to hunt wild mountain lions in Arizona, are born with exceptionally sad-looking faces—but these days they are looking even more sorrowful.

The reason for the sadness of southern Arizona hunting dogs, who can tree or kill a cougar, is the chulo—a small, vicious little animal called "tree-monkey" by the Mexicans.

The chulos took over the Tumacacori district of the Coronado National forest, according to Ranger Gilbert Sykes, and now are undisputed rulers of the roost.

Sykes reported several packs of lion-hunting dogs had tangled with the chulos and that the hounds came off second best.

Screened Sand Gives Up Gold as a By-Product

FRESNO.—Recovery of thousands of dollars worth of gold each month—more than some of the early white settlers in this area obtained in a lifetime of panning—is just a sideline to the builders of Friant dam on the San Joaquin river east of here.

The sand and gravel dug from the river bed with great scoop shovels provide the source of the gold.

G.O.P. Leaders Planning for 1942 Prove That "Hope Springs Eternal..." Machine Tool Production Studied...

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—Those Republican "leaders" who recently met in Chicago and planned "details" of the 1942 congressional campaign are a living proof of the old saying that "hope springs eternal in the human breast."

Certainly the gentlemen are not concerned about past performances. The notion that history repeats itself, especially in politics, should make them smile at their own antics, but apparently they are very serious indeed. At this time, when the pattern of America slowly drifting into a war being repeated after twenty-odd years, an outsider would think men with political ambitions would be trying to project the present situation to his own advantage.

Some of the isolationists, especially in the senatorial group, are trying to do just that. It would seem to observers that, if one studied the situation of each with regard only to selfish ambition, the lads are not acting shrewdly.

Cast your own mind back to that list of the "little group of willful men" denounced by Woodrow Wilson less than a month before this country entered the war. They were the isolationists of their day. Did any of them achieve their burning personal ambitions? One of them, years later, in 1924, was nominated for President—but on the third party ticket. That was Robert M. LaFollette, father of the present Wisconsin senator. His ticket, on which Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, leader of the present isolationists, was the candidate for vice president, carried precisely one state—LaFollette's own Wisconsin.

None of the others enhanced his political stature after that, though one of them, George W. Norris of Nebraska is still in the senate, and has lived to see his anti-utility crusade grow and blossom.

Reminiscent of Another Day

But let's revert to the Republican leaders now plotting for 1942. It is somewhat reminiscent of the so-called "Grass Roots" Republican conclave held in Illinois during Roosevelt's first administration. It would be easy to recall names. Anyone can remember them, but to name a name requires an explanation of that particular case history, each one of which would require at least a column.

Suffice it to say that no one who was prominent in that gathering got anywhere as a result of it—even in the Republican convention which met in 1936. Soreness over several of these disappointments spotted the bad apples in the barrel which made the Republican National campaign of 1936 one of the most maladroit in recent political history—certainly since that for Charles E. Hughes in 1916.

Not that Alfred M. Landon had a Chinaman's chance of beating Roosevelt anyhow, even if his campaign had been well managed, but many of the personal jealousies which literally infested G.O.P. national headquarters while Landon was a candidate were the fruit of that Grass Roots convention.

Let us turn back to a successful campaign of the Republicans, that of 1920. It is true that Will H. Hays built up the most efficient organization the party ever had. That was due to the ability of Mr. Hays.

But—did any of the men who did that job, the men who planned what the party should do back in 1919, get their wishes in 1920? Hays, as everyone knew, hoped for the nomination himself. The platform, so carefully worked out in advance, was thrown on the scrap heap by the Chicago convention. And Warren Harding was nominated.

Machine Tool Production Problems

Despite strikes, inefficiency in high places, and lack of preparation when everybody ought to have known it was necessary, America's war machine is moving.

It will move faster and faster. Leon Henderson complained that the machine tool industry is operating at only one-third of its capacity. This is not as bad as it sounds, because he was thinking in terms of three shifts, seven days a week.

Experts who know the machine tool industry tell the writer, production of machine tools can be doubled.

This is of the utmost importance as more and more factories are being converted from peace time to national defense business. All of them, almost without exception, need retooling. In fact, it has not been long since the real bottleneck of national defense was machine tools.

Most of the plants now engaged on war orders have been retooled. The work yet to be done by the machine tool industry involves plants which are being completely changed over—for instance from electric refrigerators to armament.

Vanished Men

By GEORGE MARSH Penn. Publishing Co. W.N.U. Service

THE STORY SO FAR: Bound for the Chibougamau gold country, six men lost their lives on the Nottaway river. Red Malone, Garrett Finlay, brother of one of the six, and Blaise, half-breed guide, arrive at Nottaway posing as surveyors.

There was the scuffling of moccasins in the trade-room below. "Sergeant!" called McNab, in a voice thin with excitement, "Who do you think's heading in here in that canoe?"

"If it's Tete-Blanche, McNab, watch your step. Have David and his boy stand by, outside. We can't see much through these cracks."

"It's Jules Isadore!"

"Isadore?" The three in the loft straightened where they lay. Finlay's fingers bit into Red's arm. Isadore, walking right into their hands! But the time was not ripe. There was Lise! There was that plane from the Bay and the evidence they lacked.

To have Isadore disappear, now, would put them all on their guard, at Waswanipi. Lise must be safe, first. No, the time was not ripe to arrest Jules Isadore.

"Get him to talk his head off!" Garry called. "Carry on as we planned!"

"Aye! Aye! I'm off to meet the blackguard!"

"Now what the hell?" drawled Red. "What's he after, here? He must think we ran his guard on the Quiet Water. He's come here to pump McNab."

"He's worried," said Finlay. "He thinks we've slipped him and are making for the steel or Rupert."

"And he knows if we reach there it will cook his goose!"

After an interval Finlay recognized Isadore's voice as he entered the trade-room with McNab.

"Well, McNab," began Isadore with the purr of a cat in his voice, "I'm here to let by-gones be by-gones and I hope you are. We've fought for the fur in the past but I've got a proposition, now, that's to our mutual advantage." There was a dramatic pause, then: "McNab, you and I can make big money together."

Garry's elbow pressed Red's arm. "Oh, I know how to take a licking!" laughed McNab. "Before you go into it, sit down and have a taste of the best whiskey the Hudson's Bay ever imported."

"Thanks, I will!" There was the pop of a pulled cork, the tinkle of glass and an interval of silence, then: "By the way, did a party posing as government surveyors stop here in June?"

"No, but they stopped yesterday."

Through a crack between the planks Finlay saw Isadore's hand stiffen with the glass it held half way to his lips. Then the hand returned the glass to the table at which the two sat. "Went through yesterday?" Isadore's voice was as brittle as ice.

"Yes, bound for Rupert."

"They lied, McNab. They came here for supplies. They're bound back to Waswanipi. What kind of a cock-and-bull yarn did they tell you?"

McNab laughed. "Why, they had a wild tale about a medicine-man filling the Montagnais' heads with mumbo-jumbo and their stomachs with your whiskey, Isadore."

"My whiskey? That's a criminal offense! Do they think I'm a fool? The Indians believe Finlay's transit is an evil eye that has sickened some of the children. There are parties of Montagnais hunting for him, now."

"They're wasting their time. He's gone north."

"I don't think so!" There was an interval of silence then the trade-room rattled with Isadore's metallic laugh. "McNab, let's be frank! Just what did they tell you about Jules Isadore?"

It was McNab's turn to laugh. "It wasn't complimentary. They seem to think you know something about the drowning of those six men."

The muscles in Finlay's body tightened as he listened.

"I do," Isadore replied, in a voice as cool as wind off frozen tundra. "My people found two bodies and the Indians picked up pieces of canoes the year before that. But here's my proposition, McNab. It means comfort for you and your family for life. Man, I'll make you rich if you show the brains I think you've got."

"You mean—you've struck gold—on the Waswanipi?"

"I have. And I'm here to cut you in on it."

Finlay could hear Red's breath slowly leave his mouth. So Isadore had been protecting a gold strike on the river! That was the answer to it all.

"Gold! You've found gold in those sand-bars?"

"They're as rich as the beaches were at Nome, McNab. And I'm offering you an interest. Are you listening?"

"Am I listening? Man, you've knocked me flat as a wind-fall! A glass of scotch with you, Isadore, on your good luck!"

"And your good luck, McNab!"

The neck of a bottle clicked against glasses as the drinks were poured. "But before we talk business I want to ask you if this fake surveyor told you he shot three men and wounded another?"

"Shot three men? Why—what for?"

INSTALLMENT THIRTEEN

Suspicion prevails that Isadore, rich fur man has made a gold strike and aims to keep prospectors out of the country. En route to the Hudson's Bay post they visit Isadore in his palatial home, meet his wife and Lise, Isadore's stepdaughter.

"I don't know, but he murdered them in cold blood. He's a gunman, a dead shot, sent here by a Montreal syndicate to locate our placer strike."

"To avoid a rush of prospectors in here we've never registered our claims. The minute we did that the lake would be over-run. But they've found out we ship gold to Montreal. So they're out to jump us. Of course he can make a map. He's a mining engineer."

Red's fingers closed on Finlay's arm as McNab exploded: "Well, I'll be skinned! A gunman! Killer! That's what he's here for! To locate your gold strike!"

"Exactly!"

The conversation below was approaching the boiling point for the three men rigid in the fur-loft.

"Well, I'm waiting for your proposition, Isadore."

"Just a minute until I give you the picture. Finlay's going back up the Waswanipi to hunt for our placer beds. And he's going to disappear. He'll either drown as the other men did, in that white-water, or the Montagnais will wipe out his party. When the police are sent in here to investigate, they'll blame me for losing control of my Indians and not notifying the authorities. They may even charge me with knowing too much about those men who were drowned!"

"All right! Where do I come in, Isadore?"

"You're going to say when they take your testimony that you know the river is almost impassable

water and you believe that the other parties and Finlay's men drowned. But to your knowledge the Indians went completely out of control this summer over this evil eye superstition; that your own Indians brought you rumors that the Waswanipi Montagnais were hunting for Finlay and that he never had a show to get out alive anyway."

"Well, that's the truth!" blurted McNab. "If he went back yesterday, as you say, I don't believe he'll ever be heard from."

"You're a partner after my own heart!" chuckled Isadore. "He never will!"

McNab cleared his throat. "Now about this partnership!"

Isadore clapped his glass on the table. "I'm offering you a fifth interest in the business, one thousand shares of Waswanipi Gold, Limited, when we incorporate. Last year that fifth interest ran into five figures, Duncan McNab."

"Five figures! Great Jehoshaphat! You must have struck a bonanza!"

The silence which followed seemed the measure of the Scotchman's amazement.

Isadore's callous laugh brought McNab back to realities. "We have struck a bonanza and I'm cutting you in on it. Here's a thousand, now, in two five hundred dollar bills, as evidence of my good faith and to bind our bargain. Now, McNab, are you with me?"

"Five hundred dollar bills! First ones I ever saw! But wait! You mean to say you're handing me a fifth interest in your gold strike for telling the police what I know is the truth?"

Finlay had not misjudged his man. McNab was playing to a far-thee-well the part of the dazed trader in his first contact with big business.

"Just that, my friend!" Isadore answered. "Of course, whatever happens, you're going to defend your property and your partner. You're going to fight for your own! But to the police you're a silent partner, understand? You're still a Hudson's Bay man."

"I understand. Put it there, Isadore! I'm with you!"

"Good! Here's luck to Waswanipi Gold, Limited, and the owners, Isadore, Blondell and McNab!"

ter. Answering an appeal from Lise, Finlay is ambushed and rescued by Malone and Blaise. It develops that they are Mounted Police officers. They visit McNab, Hudson's Bay trader, and hide when Isadore arrives unexpectedly.

Again McNab cleared his throat. "Now—a what do you say to a bit of writing, so there may be no misunderstanding and everything'll be shipshape!"

Finlay's elbow found Malone's ribs. There spoke the true Scot. "Get him on paper, McNab!"

Garry breathed. "We'll use that some day—if we live."

"Ah—yes, of course," Isadore assented. "Give me a pen and paper."

Shortly the men in the loft heard McNab read aloud:

"For value received and in consideration of his future services I, Jules Isadore, President of Montreal, hereby bargain, sell and assign one thousand shares of the common stock of said company, when issued, to Duncan McNab, now of Matagami Lake."

"Waswanipi Gold, Limited"

"By Jules Isadore, President."

"How's that, McNab?"

"Fine! And it's mighty generous of you, Isadore. I'll never forget it."

There was the sound of voices outside the trade-house. The door creaked on its hinges.

"What's the matter, Labelle?" asked Isadore.

"Comin' on to blow, soon! Beeg wind cloud een sout'-wes'! We gotta start to camp at de inlet."

"All right. I'll be with you in a minute!"

The men left the trade-house.

"McNab," said Isadore, pushing back his chair, "you're a shrewd man and know where your bread's buttered. Stick with me and I'll make you rich!" The ice suddenly returned to Isadore's voice. "But if you change your mind—if the police scare you and you double-cross me, you won't live long! Understand me, McNab?" Isadore snapped his fingers. "You'll disappear like that!"

But the trader laughed. "You think I'm crazy, Isadore?" he blurted, and Finlay was relieved. "Leave the police to me, man. I'll handle them. We're partners now, aren't we? You've cut me in on a bonanza! Don't worry about Duncan McNab!"

The two men left the trade-room bound for the shore. Shortly the put-put of the outboard motor drifted up from the lake. With a grunt of relief Red rolled over on his back and stretched his long arms as Blaise and Garry sat up.

"So it's placer gold on the Waswanipi he's covering up, after all! What a line of hokey he handed McNab! And did McNab do a job on him?"

"We may have use for that fake bill of sale, some day. Well, Blaise, how about it?"

"Kiputch!" Blaise grunted, regretfully. "We make big mistake to let that faller go! He hunt us all de more hard now he tink he got McNab in his pocket!"

"That's true! He'll make the lake hot for us, now, but we haven't got the evidence I want, yet. What puzzles me, Red, is this plane from the Bay. It doesn't fit into the picture."

McNab found his guests waiting in the trade-room. "Well, how was that?" the Scotchman chuckled.

"McNab, you'd have made a great actor! It was perfect!"

"A fifth interest in Waswanipi Gold, when issued!" exploded McNab. "He must think I'm a numbskull to swallow that. It'll never be issued. If he gets out of this scrape, all he has to do is incorporate under another name and McNab holds the bag. It took will power, Sergeant, not to smash that sneering face of his. He forgot I'm Scotch."

"So am I," Garry laughed. "But Isadore's badly worried. He knows he'll need your help with the police."

"Anyhow, I'm richer by a thousand dollars, if it's not counterfeited."

"That's also evidence we may use," said Garry. "Well, if this storm blows over, we're going to paddle all night, so we'll say good-by."

Red lingered behind as Garry and Blaise left the room.

"I want a word with you, Mr. McNab, before we go," he said.

The trader stared curiously into Red's candid, blue eyes. "Well, constable, what's on your mind?"

"Thistle!"

"Thistle? Why, you've only known her since yesterday."

"That's true." Malone's eyes were dark with the intensity of his feeling. "But it didn't take us long—to find out. I just want to tell you that I'm coming back here. She'll be waiting for me."

McNab's bushy brows pulled down over his searching eyes as he studied Malone's bronzed face, shot with freckles. "I didn't realize—you two—"

"It seems sudden, I know. I've never believed in it. But it's true. Thistle and I knew last night that it was—that way with us. I love her, and don't fear. I'll come back through hell for her!"

THE HOLY SPIRIT OUR HELPER

LESSON TEXT—John 3:5-8; Acts 1:8; Romans 8:26-28; Galatians 5:22-26.
GOLDEN TEXT—As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God.—Romans 8:14.

Nothing could be more practical or blessed for and in the life and service of the believer than an understanding of the person and work of the Holy Spirit; yet it is a subject concerning which most Christians are woefully ignorant.

Before taking up the work of the Spirit as it appears in our lesson, we should understand that the Holy Spirit is a person, not an influence which may exert itself upon a service, or a power which a man may obtain and use. He—the Spirit—is one of the Trinity, with the attributes of a person, doing the work of a person and always referred to as a person in Scripture. (When "it" is used of the Holy Spirit in the A.V. it will be found to be corrected to "him" in the R.V.)

What then does this divine person do? The work of creation was His as one of the Godhead. He regenerates, He teaches, He comforts, He leads, He calls and qualifies Christian workers, He is the divine author of the Bible. These and many other things He does, this One who indwells the believer as the ever-present Guide and Counselor. The Christian is

I. Born of the Spirit (John 3:5-8).

The new birth is indispensable to entrance into the kingdom of God. We either enter that way or we do not enter at all. Let's be clear about that. "Ye must be born again" is not the edict of a church or the plea of a preacher; it is the plain statement of our Lord Himself (v. 5).

The Holy Spirit is indispensable to regeneration. We must be born of the Spirit. How it takes place we can no more explain than the coming or going of the wind, but just as the power of the wind is known to us by clear evidence, so the regenerating power of the Spirit, mysterious though it be in operation, is known to us by the evidences of redeeming grace in a man's life.

II. Empowered by the Spirit (Acts 1:8).

Spiritual birth calls for service for Christ. For that we must have the power of the Holy Spirit. A man may do many ordinary things in the strength of his own body and mind (although even these ought always to be under the Spirit's control), but when he comes to witnessing for Christ, teaching or preaching God's Word, he must have Holy Spirit power or he is utterly ineffective.

III. Directed by the Spirit (Rom. 8:26-28).

The guidance of the Holy Spirit, especially in the matter of prayer, is stressed in these verses, but they are a part of a longer passage dealing with the indwelling, enabling, and guiding power of the Holy Spirit (read vv. 9-14). Every detail of life in the home, at business, or in social relations should be in conscious submission to His leading.

It is in the realm of the spiritual, however, that we find ourselves peculiarly infirm (v. 26), and this shows itself especially in prayer—"we know not how to pray as we ought." Then the Spirit in the Christian makes intercession. How blessed! "The practical meaning of these profound words seems to be that the divine Spirit, by His immediate influence in the saint's soul, which becomes as it were the organ of his own address to the Father, secures the rightness of the essence of the saint's prayer. To our understandings such intercessions with groanings which cannot be uttered, take the form of desires of ours, inspired and secured by Him. In any special case of prayer, the saint may or may not use words; but anyway the root-desires that underlie the prayer, being the Holy Spirit's promptings, are unutterable to the full. In the heart the Father sees below the surface of our ignorance the sacred longings which are the expression of the Spirit's influence" (H. C. G. Moule).

IV. Walking in the Spirit (Gal. 5:22-26).

Being born again of the Spirit, living daily by the Spirit, it is right that (as v. 25 puts it) "if we live by the Spirit, let us also walk by the Spirit." The works of the flesh, horrible in their wickedness and lust, are listed in the verses preceding (vv. 19-21), and then by striking contrast we have the fruit of the Spirit in the life of the Christian. Note the distinction: Work is something we produce; fruit is something that grows.

Walking in the Spirit the Christian finds in his life the inward graces of love, joy, and peace. These then express themselves outwardly in longsuffering, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, meekness, and self-control. The Spirit-filled man is not only a good man; he lives a good life.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, October 12.

The Golden Text was, "Heal me, O Lord, and I shall be healed; save me, and I shall be saved: for thou art my praise" (Jeremiah 17:14).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "And when Jesus departed thence, two blind men followed him, crying, and saying, Thou son of David, have mercy on us. And when he was come into the house, the blind men came to him: and Jesus saith unto them, Believe ye that I am able to do this? They said unto him, Yea, Lord. Then touched he their eyes, saying, According to your faith be it unto you. And their eyes were opened" (Matthew 9:27-30).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "As for sin and disease, Christian Science says, in the language of the Master, 'Follow me; and let the dead bury their dead.' Let discord of every name and nature be heard no more, and let the harmonious and true sense of Life and being take possession of human consciousness" (p. 355).

COOK COUNTY DELINQUENT TAX LIST

OFFICE OF COUNTY TREASURER OF COOK COUNTY AND EX-OFFICIO COUNTY COLLECTOR OF COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS.

Advertisement and Notice of Collector of Cook County of Application for Sale of Delinquent Lands and Lots for General Taxes for the year 1940 and Prior Years, and Notice of Sale Thereof and application for judgment, fixing the correct amount of any tax paid under protest and for order for sale on such payments as provided by law.

made and not executed as noted, will be exposed to public sale at the County Building of Cook County, where the County Court is held in said County for the amount of taxes, interest and costs due thereon respectively.

The following is the list of delinquent lands and lots in Orchard Township upon which the taxes remain due and unpaid, the name of the owners, where known, the total amount due thereon (excluding delinquent special assessments separately advertised) and the year or years for which the same is due. (The total amount due in this application on each tract or parcel of land or lot is the sum of the amounts appearing due in this advertisement.)

EXPLANATORY NOTE — In this list in all places where no other notation is made the figures in the column "S" (meaning dollars) and the "cts" (meaning cents) represent the taxes due and unpaid for the year A. D. 1940. Where the letter "F" is placed to the left of the figures in this column it is intended for an abbreviation of the word "Forfeiture", and denotes that the amounts set down to the right of the same are the amounts due and unpaid on said land and lots for which said lands and lots have been previously forfeited to the state. When back taxes are extended they are indicated by B. T.

Payments of taxes, made after printers copies are sent to the publisher for listing and appear as delinquent in this advertisement will be satisfied in judgment records before sale.

Where no description of property (either land, lot block or portion thereof) appears in said list to the left of and opposite the figures in said column headed "S" (meaning dollars) and "cts" (meaning cents), said figures relate to the land, lot block or portion thereof last above described, appearing to the left of and opposite "S" and "cts" column "Name" in the words "name" and "desc" where used in the list means name of the owner of said delinquent lands or lots and "desc" in said words means description of said lands or lots.

President Mrs. Chas. Maddox presided at the meeting. The general theme for this year's program is "Individual Responsibility to the Community." Oct. meeting, Parent-Child; Nov. Leadership; Jan. Commercial; Feb. PTA. March, Community; School; Reader-Library.

Mrs. Earl Reish, membership chairman, announced an initial paid up membership of 27. The membership quota provides for a ten per cent increase plus 3 members over last year's membership. Based on last year's membership of 65, this would mean that a membership of 70 will be required. Inasmuch as every association which reaches its quota by March 31st will be designated as a "Gold Leaf" association and receive a special certificate of recognition. Mrs. Reish urges every parent of a school child and everyone in the community interested in the welfare of the school children to join the association.

The new members of the family were introduced by Principal Rawland and the association members were given an opportunity to inspect the many changes made in the school plant.

Following the business meeting, the first of the year's program "Health, Parent-Child Responsibility" was presented with Dr. Moreland Emmerson of the Cook County Bureau of Public Welfare as the guest speaker. Dr. Emmerson spoke on "Teeth and their Preservation" and stressed the importance of good dental hygiene. Dr. Emmerson was assisted by Nurse Egan and his talk was amplified by motion picture films.

Doughnuts and coffee were served at the close of the evening.

at the annual conference of the Methodist church held in Wilmette during the past week, Rev. H.L. Brett has been reappointed to the pastorate of the Orland Park Methodist church for another year. Rev. Paul Sanders, former pastor of the local church and now head of the Community Center Foundation has been appointed Conference Evangelist.

Marvin Schmadeke, son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Schmadeke who has been in army service at the Coast Artillery base at Camp Davis, N. C. for the past six months, has received his honorable discharge and is now at home, where he will take over the management of his father's store.

O. W. Ellwood, new instructor in agriculture and athletic coach at the Orland Park Community High school is now located at the Blood place at 108th Ave., and 167th street. Mr. Ellwood hopes to be able in the next few weeks to make a survey of the agricultural situation of the community and to contact the parents of those pupils interested in this subject.

Uncle Sam sure moves fast these days. Oct. 9th, Cyril Kay was inducted into military service and was immediately sent to the mobilization center at Camp Grant. Sunday, October 12 Mr. and Mrs. Lester Kay, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Rice of Tinley Park and Miss Louise Kriz of Palos Park motored to Camp Grant to pay him a surprise visit. The surprise, however, and disappointment too, was on them, for on their arrival at camp they learned that Cyril was already on his way to Camp Roberts, California.

The regular meeting of Laurel Camp R. N. A. will be held Thursday evening, Oct. 23 in the Legion hall. Following the meeting there will be a Hallowe'en party and all members are requested to attend in costume.

No pioneer Industrial, Commercial or Professional Review would be complete without prominent and notable mention of this aggressive and leading concern.

Chas. F. Carter in Berwyn in the Real Estate business has been established for almost 20 years and his successful ventures are too numerous to mention here.

Any business to be permanently successful must be founded on principles of honesty and fair dealing and full value for the price asked. From this there can be no deviation regardless of economic or other conditions.

Every successful business in the United States, the ones that have started from a small beginning, and have endured year after year, are built on an ideal. That ideal has always included a self imposed obligation to keep faith with the public by maintaining values the year round regardless of conditions.

Here the public has at its disposal the services of a man who possesses the knowledge and who obtained his business education in the school of practical experience.

The satisfaction of owning your own home is something everyone should experience. Today, while materials are low priced and good labor is plentiful is the time to act. Build that home you have wanted so long.

Chas. F. Carter's increasing patronage and the demand for his services are adequate proof that it pays to serve the people to the best of one's ability. His excellent services are constantly making this country a better place in which to live and we wish to bring before the people the fact that his work is always competent and honest.

Therefore in this 1941 Pioneer Business Review, we refer Mr. Chas. F. Carter, Realtor, to all of our readers as one worthy of their fullest support and their patronage.

The Colonial Camera Shop offers an excellent service in Kodaks, Cameras, Motion Picture Cameras, Projectors, Screens, Films and accessories and carry a complete and well selected stock.

Every family should have a camera of some size and take pictures of the family at different times, pictures of scenes on trips and other occurrences which aid in the placing of the family history in album form and in pictures.

They feature a large stock of all sides of Kodaks and have all the equipment for home movies, and especially feature the home moving picture projector, which gives you in the home a fine reproduction apparatus for your films. It may be fitted with attachments for the proper showing in color and gives a steady clear reproduction which will afford constant satisfaction and delight.

The Kodak finishing department has the reputation of doing fine quality work. Drop in here with your negatives or just mail them in and you will see how rapidly they will develop them and have everything ready for you. The work is high class and very reasonable.

In this review, we are pleased to compliment the Colonial Camera Shop and Mr. Chas. F. Dostal, the manager, upon the part they are playing in the life of the period and would say that every family appoint someone to make a visit to this store and get acquainted with the latest in the way of cameras.

Remember that every telephone call is "made to order." There must be special equipment and individual handling to give you the connection you want when you want it.

Team-work helps, of course. Nearly 30,000 Illinois Bell men and women work together to provide telephone service that is prompt and efficient... and friendly as well.

All crisp, crunchy, and some slightly nutty, all of today's recipes are so fashioned as to send you on a real cookie-baking spree. Fill that lovely cookie jar of yours until the sides are fairly bulging with goodies so you can have cookies a-plenty to put in the children's lunch boxes, to serve as afternoon snacks, and as a pick-up for mealtime.

If you're doing some baking for a bazaar, there's nothing quite like plates of yummy cookies to put over the sales. Remember, you can sell a lot more, if you give out some samples. These can be set on plates with white paper doilies, for sampling, and those to be sold put in boxes already fixed. Cookies can be sold by the dozen if they're fancy and somewhat elaborate, by the pound if they're small drop cookies or squares.

Here's an interesting variation of the filled cookie, both dainty and delectable.

Corn Flake Filled Cookies.

(Makes 36 medium-sized cookies)

- 1 cup shortening
- 1 cup brown sugar
- 3½ cups flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup water
- ½ teaspoon vanilla
- 2 cups cornflakes

Blend shortening and sugar thoroughly. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together and add alternately with water and flavoring to first mixture. Stir in coarsely rolled corn flakes. Chill. Roll dough to ¼ inch thickness. Cut with cookie cutter. Spread one round with filling, put on a second round and press edges together with a fork. Bake on a greased baking sheet in a hot (425 degrees) oven about 12 minutes.

Filling.

- 1½ cups chopped dates
- ½ cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons water
- 2 tablespoons orange juice
- 1 tablespoon orange rind

Combine all ingredients together and cook until soft paste is formed. Cool before filling cookies.

These little butter balls make good nibbling and smart additions to your teatime table. Made with butter, their flavor will be something you'll long cherish and remember.

*Butter Rolls.

(Makes 7 dozen small cookies)

- ¾ cup butter
- 1 cup brown sugar
- 1 egg
- 2 cups sifted flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- ¼ cup granulated sugar
- ½ cup finely chopped nuts

Cream brown sugar and shortening. Add beaten eggs and vanilla. Add flour and baking powder. Roll into balls the size of marbles. Mix the granulated sugar and nuts and roll the balls in the mixture. Place on a greased baking sheet and bake in a hot (400 degrees) oven 10 minutes. These cookies will flatten slightly.

LYNN SAYS:

An assortment of cookies, freshly baked and packed in tins with waxed paper between layers makes a delightful present for youngsters away at school and for friends you seldom see. When your own cookie jar has been filled to bulging, pack a few boxes from what you have and spread cheer to others, too.

Careful packing in tins with waxed paper will keep even small dainty cookies fresh for a long time. Some flavors like chocolate improve after they stand for some time. Chewy, nutty cookies are the more chewy and delicious after several days. Spicy cookies become moist and well flavored after standing.

Your cookie jar problem can be solved very neatly with toothsome oatmeal cookies with flecks of chocolate in them:

Oatmeal Cookies.

(Makes 4 dozen)

- ½ cup butter or shortening
- 1 cup brown sugar
- Grated rind of 1 orange
- 1 egg, unbeaten
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup sifted flour
- 1½ cups fine rolled oats
- 7 ounces chocolate pieces

Cream butter and sugar. Add orange rind, egg, vanilla and beat well. Add salt and flour which has been mixed with the oats. Add chocolate pieces and work into batter. Drop by spoonfuls on greased cookie sheet. Bake 15 to 20 minutes in a moderate (375 degrees) oven.

Recommendations are in for the old favorites of which you never tire. If you want to make a pretty and at the same time, a very successful platter, you might try alternate rows of both these Ginger Cookies and

Brownies:

Soft Ginger Cookies.

(Makes 5 dozen)

- 1 cup shortening
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 egg
- ½ cup molasses
- ¾ cup evaporated milk
- 3 cups flour
- 2 teaspoons soda
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon each, ginger, cinnamon

Cream sugar and shortening, add egg and molasses. Beat well, add milk and blend well. Mix dry ingredients and add to batter. Last add soda, dissolved in 2 tablespoons warm water. Drop by spoonfuls on greased baking sheet. Bake 15 minutes in a hot (375 degrees) oven.

Brownies.

(Makes 2 dozen)

- ½ cup butter or shortening
- 1 cup sugar
- 2 eggs, well beaten
- 2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
- ¾ cup flour
- ½ teaspoon baking powder
- ½ cup chopped nuts
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Beat eggs and sugar together. Add to this melted butter and chocolate and blend. Add flour, baking powder, nuts, and beat well. Pour into a greased pan and bake 30 minutes in a 350-degree oven. Cool and cut in squares.

For a delicious variation of the brownie recipe, you'll like the addition of ¾ cup of bran cereal in place of the chopped nuts. They'll give you a slightly different flavored cookie, but guaranteed to please you, just as well.

*Meat-Macaroni Casserole.

- 1 package macaroni
- ½ cup salad oil
- 1 pound hamburger
- 1 dry onion, minced
- 1 green pepper, minced
- 1 clove garlic, if desired
- 1 can tomato soup
- 2 cups peas
- 2 cups corn
- Salt and pepper

Cook the macaroni in plenty of boiling salted water and when tender, put in a sieve and rinse with cold water. Meanwhile fry the hamburger in the heated oil, stirring it occasionally to separate it. Skim out the meat and in the same fat cook onion, pepper and garlic till tender, but not browned. Garlic may be omitted entirely, and it is usually removed after the onion and pepper are cooked. Combine all ingredients and simmer 20 to 30 minutes to heat thoroughly and blend flavors, then serve.

ELMER TWITCHELL ON THE GAS CRISIS

"I'm all set for this gasoline rationing," declared Elmer Twitchell today. "Ain't a bit worried. Got myself all adjusted. Won't notice it at all."

"How so?" we asked. "Preparedness," snapped Elmer. "Been salting it away or got a pull with a gasoline bootlegger?" "Neither," explained Mr. Twitchell. "I've done nothing beyond the reach of any other American. Any auto owner can take the same steps I have so that the gas shortage won't bother him in the least."

"Speak. What have you done?" "Well, I'll tell you," said Elmer. "It's very simple. First of all, I've painted every light in the house a bright red."

"What's the big idea?" "I want the full atmosphere of the open road," he continued. "Then I've put obstacles all over every room so there'll be trouble getting anywhere. I'm hanging a dead-end sign at the front door and I put a detour marker on the back door to complicate matters."

"Yes, but . . ."

"Don't interrupt," he snapped. "I'm putting windshield wipers on every window in the house, breaking them first. I mean breaking the windshield wipers, not the windows. I want to be sure none of 'em work. Then I'm setting the furnace on full tilt and removing the thermostatic adjustments. I want to be sure I'm hot."

• • • • •

We were beginning to get the drift. "I'm putting in a big stock of horse meat, frankfurters and stale rolls, a lot of wet peanuts and plenty of bananas and soda pop. Enough to last all fall and winter," he continued. "And I've ordered a four months' supply of pickles, hard-boiled eggs and all the other junk people eat on their Sunday afternoon pleasure trips. Gas or no gas, I don't want to take any chance on being cut off from all my accustomed pleasures."

• • • • •

"You mean you're not even counting on using an auto?" we exclaimed. "Exactly," said Elmer. "I'll have my house all fixed up with everything I can get through motoring. I'm even arranging to have grease put all over the chairs and walls and I'm putting in a small stove to burn nothing but rubber. And see this?"

Elmer held up a phonograph record. "Put it on the machine and all it does is just snarl in different keys. Every little while a voice yells, 'Get over, ya big bum!'"

Mr. Twitchell was well pleased with himself. "It's a pretty good idea," we agreed.

"Good my eye. It's perfect," concluded Elmer. "Without a pint of gasoline to my name I'm all set to enjoy everything at home that I would enjoy if I went out in the auto."

INEXPLICABLE

It seems to me somewhat ironic, That tender care, massage, and tonic

Should be required of men who cherish

A scalp that's adequately hairish.

Whereas unwanted hair that's strewn

Across the chin and cheeks, though hewn

And leveled to the skin and thwarted

When it is barely getting started,

Despite mistreatment, curse, and scorning

Returns augmented every morning.

Size of Iran

The area of Iran (formerly Persia) is approximately 628,000 square miles, a vast portion of which is desert, says Pathfinder. A government census taken March 1, 1940, gave 540,087 as the population total of the 18 cities containing 15,000 or more inhabitants. The five foremost are: Tabriz, 219,000; Meshed, 139,000; Shiraz, 119,000; Isfahan, 100,000, and Hamadan, 99,000. No official estimate of the nation's total population has been made since 1935 when the figure was set at 15,000,000, of which 3,000,000 were said to be desert nomads.

First Political Cartoon

The first political cartoon in this country was designed by Benjamin Franklin and appeared in his Pennsylvania Gazette in 1754. It depicts a snake cut in eight parts, representing the eight colonies, and is captioned "Join or Die," in an attempt to unite the people during the French and Indian war. For over 20 years, whenever an occasion arose to consolidate the colonies, this crude drawing was reprinted, thus probably exerting influence over a longer period of time than any other political cartoon ever drawn.
